CHGEOL-Award

for the most relevant contribution to applied geosciences

CHGEOL, the Swiss Association of Geologists, promotes research that may have a sustainable impact on problems addressed by practitioners working in geological bureaus. The most relevant publication in this field will be awarded

CHF 3'000.–

What is «relevant»?

In addition to innovative case studies in the applied earth sciences, other research results that may influence the daily work of practitioners in a significant way are eligible for consideration. Examples could include the development of a new apparatus, chemical analysis techniques or numerical modelling algorithms.

What publications will be considered?

University publications (e.g. master, diploma or doctoral theses) or articles in refereed journals may be submitted.

Who can apply?

Any earth scientist who is affiliated with a Swiss university.

How to apply?

Download the application form from www.chgeol.org and send it together with two paper copies of your publication to:
